AHMA R1B Reading and Composition on Topics in Ancient History and Mediterranean Archaeology 4 Units
Terms offered: Not yet offered
This seminar-style course introduces students to the ecology of the ancient Mediterranean basin and to the high degree of mobility that was the human response to that ecology. Against this background we will develop an understanding of the Mediterranean Sea itself as a conduit for trade and human interactions. Moving both chronologically and geographically, we will explore the interactions between the various populations that lived, in Plato’s words, “like frogs around a pond.” We will consider the contexts and motivations for those interactions (trade, resources, religion, exploration) and the results of them (cultural, religious, economic, political).

AHMA 210 Ancient History and Mediterranean Archaeology Interdisciplinary Seminar 2 or 4 Units
Terms offered: Spring 2022, Fall 2021, Spring 2020
Team-taught by faculty from two different departments. The purpose is not only to expose students to a discipline other than their own, but to engage them directly in the application of that discipline to their own research interests. The topic and instructors will vary from year to year.

AHMA 298 Special Study 2 - 12 Units
Normally reserved for students writing the doctoral dissertation.
