

Health and Medical Sciences

Overview

The UC Berkeley–UCSF Joint Medical Program (JMP) is a five-year graduate/medical degree program. Students spend their pre-clerkship years at UC Berkeley engaging in a unique medical curriculum centered around student-led inquiry while simultaneously earning a master's degree (MS) in the Health and Medical Sciences at Berkeley Public Health. After two and a half years, students move across the Bay to UCSF to finish their medical education and receive their medical doctorate (MD).

Undergraduate Program

There is no undergraduate program in Health and Medical Sciences. However, Pre-Med/Pre-Health (<https://guide.berkeley.edu/undergraduate/degree-programs/premed/>) is a pre-professional path that students choose when preparing for a career in graduate-level health professions.

Graduate Program

Health and Medical Sciences (<https://guide.berkeley.edu/graduate/degree-programs/health-medical-sciences-program/>): UC Berkeley–UCSF Joint Medical Program (JMP).