COLWRIT 9M The U.S. Constitution: An Introduction 3 Units

Terms offered: Summer 2025 Second 6 Week Session, Summer 2024 Second 6 Week Session, Summer 2023 Second 6 Week Session

Designed for visiting and matriculated UCB students alike (including incoming LL.M. students), this seminar-style class begins by introducing the background, structure, and words of the U.S. Constitution, as well as its place in American culture and history. From there, we explore interpretations of and debates over key provisions of the Constitution and the ongoing struggle to realize the ideals reflected in its Articles and Amendments. We work our way towards several challenging questions: does the Constitution protect democracy or impede it? Is it well-tailored to contemporary realities or an anachronism? Is the U.S. experiencing (as some claim) a constitutional crisis? The only prerequisite is your interest.

COLWRIT 107 Translation in Practice 3 Units

Terms offered: Spring 2025, Spring 2024

This course provides an English language setting for an immersive dive into translation studies, as well as evaluating and producing original translated texts. Students will reflect on processes and decisions in that work, which will culminate in a significant translation project designed around principles of discovery: challenging conventional notions of a translator's visibility and creating opportunities for paratextual study, engagement, and impact. Our approach to the topic of translation will be interdisciplinary and worlded, and students are encouraged to bring their own interests, experiences, and creative agency to the classroom. Fluency reading and writing in at least one language other than English is required to take this class.

Objectives & Outcomes

Student Learning Outcomes: This course aims to help students become more practiced translators and translation critics, producing stronger and more purposeful translations while gaining mastery over the terminology and philosophies that guide these practices. Students will apply discovery practices that contextualize their work as translators in social, political, historical, or cultural frameworks.
