This class is organized as to push the limits of our creativity and refine our conceptual understanding through exacting class-wide design critiques. It is further structured so that we realize the interdependence between design and drawing, and expand our talents into a wide array of design fields. All class assignments are built in order to open us up to our unlimited design and drawing ability and to learn to design quickly and without inhibitions. Each week we will draw from a variety of sources such as faces, live models, mechanical objects, paintings, photographs, electron microscope photography but also from photos of published designs and use these sources as seeds to create relatively small design projects.

VIS STD 187B Ephemeral Land Art & City Art 4 Units

Terms offered: Prior to 2007

At the core of this class is the desire to go deep within ourselves and explore how we can artistically and critically materialize the intimate relationship between our body/mind, the arts, the Landscape and the City. Following a new theme given each week, each student will endeavor to find a place within the Land or City in which to construct an intervention (sculpture, painting, installation) that resonates with this particular place. Through weekly alternating projects centered around the Land and the City this class will focus on restructuring our experience (through listening and responding to the Land and City) across the fields of design, and the visual and performing arts.
